

Conservation

The conservation of rare and endangered animals is an important task in protecting nature, protecting biodiversity, and protecting the environment in general, which is of great concern to the world and to the people of Vietnam. Wild animals are not simply creatures living in nature, but also a critical part of the Earth's – and humanity's – ecosystem.

www.englishtreasure.asia

The idea that bear bile, rhino horn, or ivory are remedies for human diseases is archaic, barbaric, and disproven by a century of science, and the killing of rare animals to obtain them is wasteful, cruel, and foolish. Expensive clothing made from fur, skin, horns, or animal claws is only attractive to greedy and heartless people.

youtube.com/EnglishTreasure

Media reports of the destruction of wildlife have been growing, and humanity is daily driving more species to extinction and will continue to do so unless we act. Therefore we – every Vietnamese citizen – must join hands with people worldwide to protect our living environment, protect animals, and protect ourselves.

www.englishtreasure.asia

Can you name three animals that are at risk of extinction?

youtube.com/EnglishTreasure

Rhinos are killed for only one part of their bodies; which part?

Does bear bile help to cure disease?