

Emigration (Part 1)

According to United Nations estimates, the region of Europe received the most international migrants in 2019, at around 82 million, followed by North America, with 59 million. Vietnam has many people who want to emigrate to more developed countries, but how can they do this?

One of the primary methods is through studying abroad then finding a job; according to research by the personnel company SHD, up to 64% of Vietnamese students want to stay where they studied to work and live. Another path – only for the rich and super-rich – is through investing or owning assets abroad, which in some countries can provide permanent residence and even citizenship. There are also illegal methods, such as the 152 Vietnamese tourists who recently travelled to Taiwan and simply didn't leave, or the 39 Vietnamese who died in the UK after being smuggled by truck and ship. One other option is to marry a foreigner and move abroad. Vietnamese women most commonly marry Taiwanese, Chinese, Korean, and American men – an average of 18,000 Vietnamese people marry foreigners each year.
