

Hunting Foreigners

English is the global language and the second language in Vietnam and many other countries, so the desire to learn English is immense. One of the methods of learning English that young people find most appealing is conversation, and the practice of "hunting foreigners" to find someone to practice with has become popular.

www.englishtreasure.asia

Many foreigner hunters see it as an opportunity to use and improve their English, hoping that a foreigner will help them to correct their pronunciation and develop their speaking skills.

youtube.com/EnglishTreasure

But what about those foreigners? They are often tourists who have come to Vietnam to rest and explore Vietnam's exquisite landscapes. They come from many different places, and, for some, English is a second language; their own pronunciation may not be perfect, and their speech might be difficult to follow. For many, speaking with young people is interesting and offers a chance to talk freely and learn about Vietnam and its people. Yet some may also consider it annoying and irritating.

www.englishtreasure.asia

Is hunting foreigners a useful method for learning English? What do you think about this trend?

youtube.com/EnglishTreasure

What is Vietnam's second language?

Is "hunting foreigners" a good way to learn English?

How can you find a foreigner who wants to be "hunted"?