

IELTS Fraud

If you want to study or work abroad or emigrate to a country where English is the dominant language, you must demonstrate acceptable English proficiency, meaning you must pass an English test, such as IELTS.

IELTS is the abbreviation for the International English Language Testing System, which is designed to assess the language ability of candidates and enable them to study or work where English is the language of communication. IELTS conforms to the highest international standards of language assessment and is approved by universities and governments in many countries.

In Vietnam, many students choose to take the IELTS exam because of its prestige and quality. There are also many English “schools” that advertise success in only six months and textbooks made from stolen pieces of other curriculums. Teachers’ qualifications are often unverified, and some have exaggerated their skills – and forged IELTS transcripts – to win students’ trust. Yet this is not a problem with teaching, but basically fraud by con-men. Very recently, some IELTS teachers who had packed classrooms and “writers” of best-selling IELTS books have been shown to be liars, scammers, and thieves of students’ time and money.
