

The Strength of Women

There was a time when women could not read and write; their duties were to look after the family, and they were dependent on men. Some lived in extreme poverty and suffered much distress and hardship. Today, women are educated, enjoy equal status to men, and can have high incomes. Women display meticulousness, confidence, sensitivity, and adaptability; they shine daily and inspire other women. They have changed their place in society but have lost none of the allure of traditional women: many enjoy motherhood and caring for their families and parents, while still learning, training, and improving themselves for their own benefit or that of their families or careers.

There are also increasing opportunities for women's empowerment. They lead corporations and even entire countries, such as German Chancellor Angela Merkel or New Zealand Prime Minister Jacinda Ardern. Vietnamese women are no exception, and female names appear in the records of every profession. Women have achieved this through their own bravery, intellect, and determination, supported by right-thinking people in every walk of life who have seen and understood the obvious: women are precious, strong, and can achieve whatever they choose.
